Key Benefit

Security

Keep burglars out of the door

Windows

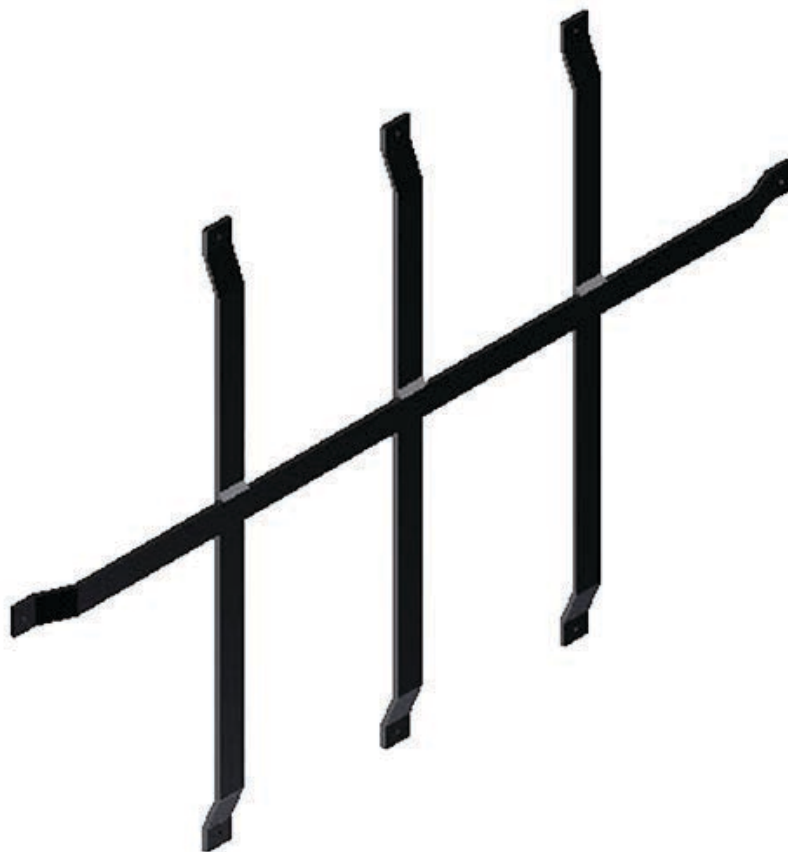

Even though our windows are quite difficult to break into, windows are the first place where burglars try to breach the door.

To discourage burglars to use the windows as a way in, protective window grating can be installed on the inside of the door.

Discouraging

Studies show that burglary is better prevented by using visible obstacles to breach a door than by locks and alarms used. Break-in time is key in what a burglar chooses as an objective.

Protective grating make it more difficult to break through the window, but more importantly it discourages burglars to select the building in the first place.

Standard delivery is black. Other colors available on request.
The protective window grating measures 600 mm x 400 mm center to center measured on the drill holes.
